TRUSTHUB CONNECT

Wisdom

The TrustHub Conversation Library

1,000 starter conversation patterns for a WhatsApp-first local community companion - written to feel warm, useful, contextual, and human without pretending AI knows what it does not know.

Core idea: Ask -> Understand -> Search -> Clarify -> Ask the Community -> Escalate to a Human -> Remember what is useful

A working seed library - not a frozen script

The library is deliberately structured so that deterministic TrustHub-authored messages can control key moments, while AI handles natural-language understanding and contextual phrasing inside clear boundaries. It also includes community and Trust Agent escalation patterns, provenance prompts, and outcome tracking language.

1. What this library is for

This document is a starter corpus for the conversational layer we discussed before committing the Connect migration. It is designed around the TrustHub product principle that the community is the engine: when TrustHub has a reliable answer, it should answer; when information is missing, it should ask the user, the community, or a human Trust Agent rather than manufacture certainty.

The TrustHub blueprint calls for persistent identity, natural-language interaction, useful follow-up questions, demand recorded as data, community contributions, provenance, and an AI -> database -> community -> human escalation path. The same blueprint also says WhatsApp is an interface rather than the underlying source of truth.

This library translates those principles into practical conversation seeds that can later become flow definitions, message templates, intent prompts, and test cases.

2. Conversation architecture: who should speak?

OWNER	Use for	Examples
AUTHORED	Messages we want to control exactly	Welcome, profile value, location confirmation, community permission, uncertainty, handoff, closure, serious-context language
AI	Natural-language understanding and contextual phrasing	Interpret messy questions, extract intent, find missing details, summarize a request, adapt tone
COMMUNITY	Ask local opted-in participants for missing information	“Does anyone know a reliable plumber who works around Chinhoyi?”
AGENT	Human intervention when the request needs a person	Local service guidance, complex cases, follow-up, escalation
NO_AI	Deterministic copy that does not need a model call	Simple onboarding, definitions, some profile/privacy explanations

3. Personality rules used throughout

• Warmth over formality. Prefer “Good afternoon, Tendai. What are we sorting out today?” over “How may I assist you?”

• One useful question at a time. Do not interrogate the user with a form disguised as chat.

• Humor is contextual. Light moments can use a small joke; serious, emotional, or safety-sensitive situations stay serious.

• Never fake certainty. If TrustHub does not know, say so and offer the next useful path.

• Do not let AI invent product promises. Authored messages control identity, privacy explanations, escalation promises, and core UX moments.

• Make the profile matter. Returning users should feel continuity because their legitimate TrustHub identity and useful history follow them.

• Make community requests permission-based. The user should understand what is being asked, who it may be shown to, and what will happen next.

• Capture outcomes. The real success condition is whether a person got useful help, not whether a chatbot produced a confident sentence.

4. Coverage map

This 1,000-entry starter set spans new-user onboarding, returning users, profiles, location, language, privacy, business discovery, service discovery, hours, contacts, addresses, service areas, availability, price/quotes, reviews, trust signals, business corrections, provider contributions, community questions, waiting states, community responses, memory, Trust Agent escalation, serious-context routing, frustration, small talk, humor, follow-ups, unresolved requests, successful outcomes, owner flows, voice/photo contributions, and edge cases.

Can I stop notifications?

WISDOM

You should not get five messages when one will do. We can design notifications around meaningful changes.

NEXT MOVE

6. What should happen before production

• Treat these as conversation seeds and test cases, not as 1,000 hard-coded production replies.

• Create a structured conversation specification for each intent: trigger, state, required context, authored message, AI task, fallback, community escalation, agent escalation, memory write, and outcome.

• Use real launch transcripts from Harare and Chinhoyi to decide which patterns deserve deterministic wording and which should be left to contextual AI.

• Keep community escalation permission-based and preserve provenance for contributions. A community reply should never automatically become a verified fact.

• Use outcomes such as “useful answer,” “successful match,” “unanswered,” “community response,” and “problem solved” as the eventual operational measures described in the TrustHub product blueprint.

• Only after this conversation model is accepted should the Connect migration schema be finalized against the live TrustHub database.

7. Research and product inputs

Product source: TrustHub WhatsApp-First Community Intelligence & Identity Blueprint / working case study, 26 September 2026. The blueprint specifies persistent TrustHub identity, natural-language interaction, useful follow-up questions, demand becoming data, community missions, provenance, Trust Agent escalation, and the AI -> database -> community -> human path. □filecite□turn38file8□

External research used to broaden the question families: Google Business Profile guidance highlights service areas, phone numbers, hours, services, locations and reviews as core local-business information surfaced to customers (Google Business Profile Help: support.google.com/business).

Zimbabwe-specific marketplace examples were also reviewed to capture locally relevant service-discovery questions around provider categories, locations, booking/requests, and direct provider contact (ZiMLiNKS, Tesha, and Gadzira).

Note: the 1,000 conversations in this starter edition are original TrustHub-oriented conversation patterns generated from the above product architecture and research inputs. They are not copied from external websites.
